The boundary of complex hyperbolic 2-space is the one point compactification of the Heisenberg group in the same way that the boundary of real hyperbolic space is the one point compactification of Euclidean space of one dimension lower.

sumption that hyperbolic geometry underlies these networks. Although difficult to visualize, hyperbolic geometry, briefly reviewed in Sec. II, is by no means anything exotic. In fact it is the geometry of the world we live in. Indeed, the relativistic Minkowski spacetime is hyperbolic, and so is the anti-de Sitter space.

midst of attempt to understand the fifth postulate of Euclidean geometry. Hyperbolic geometry is the one of the non-Euclidean geometry that is the prototype of the study of geometry on space of constant negative curvature. Hyperbolic geometry is connected the many other parts of mathematics. Like, complex Oxford Mathematical Monographs. Complex hyperbolic geometry is a particularly rich field, drawing on Riemannian geometry, complex analysis, symplectic and contact geometry, Lie group theory, and harmonic analysis. The boundary in complex hyperbolic spaces, known as spherical CR or Heisenberg geometry, reflects this richness.
